PREFACE

The Occupational Classification Manual is designed for use in the Census of Canada, 1971. Traditionally, the census occupational classification used in the immediately preceding census is revised to take account of changes in the occupational composition of the labour force resulting from industrial and technological developments in the decade. The present manual represents a much more fundamental departure from the past, however, in that it is based upon the Canadian Classification and Dictionary of Occupations (CCDO)—a multipurpose occupational classification system which provides definitions for the constituent occupations and groups. The CCDO has been developed in recent years through a co-operative project of the Department of Manpower and Immigration and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

The change from an occupational classification system designed purely for census use to a multipurpose or "standard" classification has important consequences. It brings occupational distributions of census data into a general system that includes such related statistics as those derived from immigration records, employment placement programmes, vocational education and training programmes and the like. In addition, it results in a basic revision of the grouping system used by the census for occupational data. The new system of grouping is the result of field work carried out by the Department of Manpower and Immigration over a number of years involving job analysis and occupational analysis. This, along with DBS experience in past censuses, provides a practical and useful system geared to the needs of researchers and others concerned with modern occupational programmes and problems.

This Manual was prepared in the Central Classifications Section of DBS by Mrs. Suzanne Fortey and Mrs. Bernice Richardson under the immediate supervision of Rodger O. Lee.

The CCDO project from which it was derived is carried on under the joint direction of Messrs. J.E. Andoff for the Department of Manpower and Immigration and Neil L. McKellar for the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Dominion Statistician.

INTRODUCTION

This Occupational Classification Manual, has been prepared primarily for use in the Census of Canada, 1971. It is designed as a coding manual and contains comprehensive indexes of occupational titles to obtain consistent coding of occupations enumerated in the census. Other occupational statistics obtained from such sources as immigration, employment placement and vocational training programmes are often used in conjunction with census occupational data, although heretofore no standard occupational classification system has been available for general use. Such a standard is now available in the form of the Canadian Classification and Dictionary of Occupations which has been used as the basis for this Manual.¹

The Canadian Classification and Dictionary of Occupations (CCDO)

The CCDO provides for Canada a multipurpose instrument for use in manpower research; the formulation of manpower policies; support of employment and educational programmes; for statistical survey purposes, including census taking; and for operational activities such as employment placement, employment counselling, immigration and promoting mobility of workers within the country. It is anticipated that the CCDO will increase the quantity and improve the quality and usefulness of occupational information in Canada by standardizing the occupational categories used in different programmes and consequently the occupational statistics and other information derived from them.

Volume I of the CCDO provides a systematic classification structure for all occupations in Canada. The classification structure has four levels providing successively finer detail, as follows: major groups, minor groups, unit groups and occupational titles. Definitions have been developed at all levels. Volume II deals with occupational qualification requirements.

The various groups of the classification contain occupations found to have a desirable degree of homogeneity with respect to "kind of work performed" as determined by analysis of the duties and tasks of the constituent occupations. "Kind of work performed" has been selected as the basic principle of the classification because it is the most prevalent characteristic encountered when occupations are described and analysed.

The Census Occupational Classification Manual Based on the CCDO

The occupational classification structure in this manual, being almost identical with that of the CCDO, differs considerably from the one used in the 1961 Census, although the basic principle of "kind of work performed" has been retained. This classification contains 22 major groups, 81 minor groups and 486 unit groups having 2-digit, 3-digit, and 4-digit codes respectively. Such traditional major groups as "Professional and Technical Occupations" and "Craftsmen, Production Process and Related Workers" have been sub-divided into less heterogeneous groupings at the major group level.

Users of census occupational data have experienced difficulty because of the size and heterogeneity of residual or "not elsewhere classified" groups. The CCDO has been designed to minimize the number of occupations in residual groups and this practice is carried through to the present manual. Despite this, such residual groups as those for managers and labourers could still be relatively large in census tabulations due to the problems in enumeration of occupational information. At present it is planned to further subdivide such groups by industrial categories at the tabulation stage. A cross classification by industry has been found useful in these cases because the industrial distribution of such residual occupational groups gives some indication of the kinds of work included. A list of the proposed tabulations is given in an appendix to this manual. Publication will depend upon the actual numbers reported.

Related Classifications

For statistical purposes the classification of occupations does not stand alone but must be understood as related to the classifications of industries and that of status (class of worker) — as self-employed (E or OA), employee (W) or unpaid family worker (NP).² Each of these statistical classifications supplements the others in presenting a rounded picture of the nature of a person's job.

As indicated above, an occupation is described in terms of the kind of work performed irrespective of the kind of business in which it is carried on or the "status" of the individual performing it.

The industry in which the individual is employed is determined by the principal kind of economic activity of the establishment in which he works. For this purpose an "establishment" may consist of an individual working on his own account but usually it is a factory, mine, farm, store or other place of business or an institution having certain basic records. An industrial classification is used to classify establishments according to branches of economic activity, i.e. industries. The information obtained

² These categories are identified in Question 37 of the census questionnaire as follows:

Working for wages, salary, tips or commission?	(i.e. W)
Working without pay in a family business or farm?	(i.e. NP)
Self-employed without paid help?	(i.e. OA)
Self-employed with paid help?	(i.e. E)

for an individual on the census and which is coded according to the kind of work he does (occupation) and the kind of establishment in which he works (industry), reveals more clearly the nature of the individual's work than would either a distribution by occupation or industry alone.

An individual's relationship to the enterprise in which he is engaged, i.e. his status (class of worker), provides another means of describing his work. In this case, the grouping system depends upon the kind of service performed by the individual as indicated by the form of remuneration he receives. The self-employed depend upon a residual return in the form of profit while employees are paid wages or salaries and unpaid family workers receive no set remuneration. The addition of status to the other two classifications gives a rounded picture of the nature of the individual's employment. Each of the three foregoing classification systems is independent, yet together they form a related system. The Standard Industrial Classification Manual, 1970 (SIC) published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics is the industrial counterpart of this Manual.

The qualifying word(s) for an industry or an industrial process attached to most of the occupational titles in the Manual are not intended as a description of the industry in which the individual concerned is employed. They serve to amplify the occupational titles and to distinguish identical occupational titles in entirely different work contexts.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

The Population Census Questionnaire and methods for the 1971 Census differ in several important respects from those used in the 1961 Census. For the first time information is being obtained by self-enumeration from a major part of the population. Certain questions, including those on economic characteristics are being obtained on a sample basis rather than from all individuals in the population. The question on occupation is composed of three parts resulting in more information which is expected to permit more precise coding. Despite all these changes, however, the occupational descriptions given on the census documents will inevitably be quite broad and general. To attempt to classify these returns according to an elaborate and detailed classification system would imply more precision than the census data can be expected to possess. For this reason, as mentioned earlier, only the first three levels of the classification structure, represented by two, three and four digit codes, are used in this Manual.

This Occupational Classification Manual, Census of Canada 1971 is published in two volumes. Volume I contains the classification structure and definitions for the major, minor and unit groups. Volume II contains the classification structure and two separate indexes. A Classified Index lists in-

For example, no relationship exists between the work performed by a "Blender" in cheese manufacturing and a "Blender" in tobacco product manufacturing. The former is classified in Unit Group 8223 - Milk Processing Occupations and the latter in Unit Group 8293 - Tobacco Processing Occupations. In many cases the industrial process concerned may not be the principal activity of the establishment in which the occupation is found. Thus the qualifier is not, strictly speaking, an "industrial designation". Nonetheless, knowledge of the kind of establishment in which the individual works is often useful information in coding his occupation as to kind of work performed.

The qualifiers indicating industry or industrial process used in this Manual differ from those used in the CCDO and shown after its occupational titles. The CCDO list of "industrial designations" was developed by aggregating various SIC groups. This Manual makes use of terms from the SIC as well as other words considered helpful in qualifying the occupation for census coding purposes.

The qualification "Any Industry" is attached to a considerable number of the occupational titles listed in this Manual. It is used in connection with occupations that are found in practically all industries or those carried on in a number of industries too extensive to list. If the occupational title is known to be used differently in a particular industry, it is given the qualification "Any, Except ...".

dividual occupational titles arranged alphabetically within their respective major, minor and unit groups. An Alphabetical Index presents the occupational titles in alphabetical order, irrespective of group association.

This Manual differs in some very minor respects from the complete CCDO in that a few additional groups have been provided at the various levels and a few have been deleted. These structural changes have been made solely to meet census needs. For census purposes, occupations must be combined, providing statistics at different levels of aggregation, reflecting the general character of the original information; this is unlike employment placement, for example, where very detailed occupational information is needed and where interviews can be held to provide such precise information.

The following changes from the complete CCDO will be encountered by users of this Manual:

- (a) Major Group 37 - Occupations in Sport and Recreation is listed as Minor Group 337 for census purposes.
- (b) Unit Group 1173 - Organization and Methods Analysts has been deleted and the occupations included with Unit Group 2145—Industrial Engineers.

- (c) New Unit Group 2513—Nuns and Brothers, n.o.r. has been created.
- (d) Unit Groups 3351—Writers and Editors, Publication and 3353—Writers and Editors: Radio, Television, Theatre and Motion Pictures have been combined into a new Unit Group 3352—Writers and Editors.
- (e) Unit Group 6131—Managers: Hotel, Motel and Other Accommodation has been created.
- (f) Unit Groups 6161—Laundering Occupations and 6163—Dry Cleaning Occupations have been combined into a new Unit Group 6162—Laundering and Dry Cleaning Occupations.
- (g) Unit Groups 7111—General Farmers, 7113—Animal Farmers and 7115—Crop Farmers have been combined into a new Unit Group 7112—Farmers.
- (h) Unit Groups 7181 to 7193 and 7198, dealing with farming, horticultural and animal husbandry occupations, have been combined into a new Unit Group 7182—Farm Workers.

Some 25,000 separate occupational titles comprise the Alphabetical Index in Volume II of this Manual. Many of these titles are in inverted form to facilitate coding. Groupings of these occupational titles make up the various unit groups of the classification. Within each major group, one or more minor groups are identified and within each minor group, one or more unit groups. A functional relationship is reinforced by means of the coding system. For example:

Major Group 61 —Service Occupations
Minor Group 611 —Protective Service Occupations
Unit Group 6111—Fire Fighting Occupations
Unit Group 6112—Policemen and Detectives, Government

It should be noted that the major group code is repeated at all levels and the minor group code is repeated at the unit group level.

Within relevant minor groups, provision has been made whenever possible to assign a distinct code number to particular occupational groups viz. "Foremen (or Supervisors)"; "Inspectors, Testers, Graders and Samplers"; and "Occupations in Labouring and Other Elemental Work". For example:

6120 Supervisors, Food and Beverage Preparation and Related Service Occupations
8110 Foremen, Mineral Ore Treating Occupations
8116 Inspecting, Testing, Grading and Sampling Occupations, Mineral Ore Treating 8118 Occupations in Labouring and Other Elemental Work, Mineral Ore Treating

As a general rule, the final digit of the 4-digit code identifies each of these types of occupational groups. Thus a zero signifies a category of supervisor or foreman; 6 usually signifies an inspector; and 8 a labourer. In order to maintain flexibility in the classification system, the use of 6 and 8 is not universally applied to the above groups and, where not needed for inspectors and labourers, these digits have been used without any special significance.

Special Rules for Census Coding Regarding Certain Occupations

Apprentices. — As a general rule apprentices (or learners, trainees) are classified with the occupations for which they are being trained. Thus, an apprentice plumber is classified as a plumber, an apprentice draughtsman as a draughtsman, and so on. An exception is made, however, in the case of some professional occupations. Student nurses are not classified in Unit Group 3131—Nurses, Graduate, Except Supervisors, a special Unit Group 3133—Nurses-in-training being provided for them. Articled clerks in offices of chartered accountants are classified in Unit Group 4131—Bookkeepers and Accounting Clerks, conversely interns are classified with Unit Group 3111—Physicians and Surgeons.

Helpers. — As a general rule helpers are classified either with the tradesmen or other occupations they support, or they are classified as labourers in the appropriate unit groups entitled "Occupations in Labouring and Other Elemental Work". The determining factors, as explained in Volume I of the CCDO, are the educational and vocational requirements for each occupation. For those "helpers" listed in the Alphabetical Index these factors have been taken into consideration. For helpers not listed, the most important duties of the occupation should be used as a guide to classification.

Foremen and Supervisors. — These titles are used to describe a wide range of supervisory occupations in both goods and service producing industries. Some of these occupations are closely associated with the workers supervised and may involve performance of some of the work or may involve a purely supervisory function including assigning work and coordinating the efforts of a group of workers, sometimes a group carrying out a variety of types of work. Commencing with Minor Group 337—Occupations in Sport and Recreation, the first unit group within each minor group is reserved for supervisors (foremen). Four exceptions have been made to this rule viz. in Minor Groups 611—Protective Service Occupations; 614—Personal Service Occupations; 731—Fishing, Hunting, Trapping and Related Occupations; and 915—Water Transport Operating Occupations. In Minor Groups 611 and 614 supervisory staff are classified with the workers they supervise. In Minor Groups 731 and 915, the occupation of captain of a vessel is classified in its own special group. The last digit of the four-digit code designating supervisors (foremen) is characteristically a zero (0).

Labourers. — In the 1961 Census Classification, all labourers except those engaged in the primary industries (i.e. agriculture, fishing, logging or mining) were coded to one class. In the CCDO, however, each relevant minor group contains a unit group "Occupations in Labouring and Other Elemental Work" to accommodate occupations requiring little educational development or vocational preparation. Most four-digit codes designating occupations in labouring and other elemental work have a final digit eight (8).

Members of the Armed Forces. — Two unit groups are provided for members of the Armed Forces; 6116—Commissioned Officers and 6117—Other Ranks. As the Canadian Armed Forces are now a unified force, rank structures are identical for all three environments—land, sea and air. Those holding the rank of Officer Cadet or higher are coded to 6116, while those having the rank of Chief Warrant Officer or lower are coded to 6117. Traditional ranks such as Commodore or Petty Officer are translated into the singular rank structure. For census purposes members of the Armed Forces are not coded to the kind of work they do, even though it may be reported on the census questionnaire. Coders simply determine the individual's rank and apply the relevant code number.

Civilian employees at the Department of National Defence are, of course, coded elsewhere in the classification structure by kind of work performed.

Members of Religious Orders. — Those members of religious communities or orders who are primarily engaged in occupations other than those in Major Group 25—Occupations in Religion (e.g. in teaching, nursing, social welfare work, sewing, bookbinding, cooking or farming) should be classified in accordance with the kind of work performed. Thus, for census purposes, Major Group 25 is intended to include only those primarily engaged in performing religious functions.

Managers. — A distinction is drawn between managers in large organizations and small shop-owners or businessmen managing their own businesses as working proprietors.

Managers in large organizations include executives and senior officials of government, social institutions, scientific institutions and business corporations. The essential function in the work performed in these occupations is that of policy-making. Such managers are classified to Major Group 11—Managerial, Administrative and other Related Occupations.

Departmental managers of retail chain or department stores, store managers of retail chain stores and store managers of supermarket chains are not classified in Major Group 11 since they are considered to be primarily occupied with carrying out policy that is established at headquarters. Accordingly they are classified as supervisors in the relevant minor groups.

Managers in the professional field such as in law, accounting or pharmacy are classified according to work performed. In most instances they will be coded to the unit group related to their profession rather than Major Group 11.

Special managerial groups have been created for hotel or motel managers and for farm managers. These are Unit Group 6131—Managers: Hotel, Motel and Other Accommodation and Unit Group 7131—Farm Management Occupations.

Proprietors. — Proprietors (or owners, co-owners, partners) are differentiated in the census enumeration into two categories i.e.: Proprietor (OA) and Proprietor (E). In some cases "employers" are coded differently than "own accounts" in the same kind of business. As a general rule, proprietors are coded to the occupations associated with the particular business or industry concerned, either as supervisors or as members of the relevant trade, craft or profession. In other cases all relevant proprietors are classified to the trade or craft concerned, as illustrated by the following examples:

Proprietor (E or OA) and Manager—Barber Shop, beauty shop (classified in the Unit Group 6143—Barbers and Hairdressers).

Proprietor (E or OA) and Manager—Custom tailoring shop (classified in Unit Group 8553—Tailors and Dressmakers).

Proprietor (E or OA) and Manager—Photographic studio (classified in Unit Group 3315—Photographers and Cameramen).

Proprietor (E or OA) and Manager—Shoe repair shop (classified in Unit Group 8561—Shoe-making and Repairing).

Examples of Proprietors (E or OA) whose main work activity is taken to be either supervisory, or purely administrative, and who are coded as supervisors within their respective minor groups are:

Proprietor (E or OA) and Manager—Art gallery (classified in Unit Group 5130—Supervisors: Sales Occupations, Commodities). Note: Managers of public art galleries are called "curators" and are coded to Unit Group 2350.

Proprietor (E or OA) and Managers—Rooming house, Tourist cabins, Motel, etc. (classified in Unit Group 6131—Manager: Hotel, Motel and Other Accommodation).

The general assumption is that Proprietor (OA) i.e. without paid employees is primarily engaged in the trade or craft indicated. Therefore, a person reported as an own-account contractor in carpentry, painting, plumbing, etc. is classified with the appropriate tradesmen. An own-account taxi-cab or truck-owner is classified in Unit Group 9173—Taxi Drivers and Chauffeurs or Unit Group 9175—Truck Drivers. An own-account artificial flower-maker is classified in Unit Group 8599—Other Product Fabricating, Assembling and Repairing Occupations, n.e.c.

As a general rule, a Proprietor (E) i.e. with paid employees is deemed to be concerned mainly with supervising others in the running of his business and is, therefore, coded to the supervisors (foremen) unit group within the appropriate minor group. Examples are:

Broker (E)—Real estate (classified in Unit Group 5170—Supervisors: Sales Occupations, Services).

Proprietor (E)—Auto repair shop (classified in Unit Group 8580—Foremen, Mechanics and Repairmen except Electrical).

Proprietor (E)—Taxi cab operation (classified in Unit Group 9170—Foremen, Motor Transport Operating Occupations).

Census coding of occupation for the various categories of proprietor is complex. When in doubt, the coder is instructed to consider all factors including income, status, and main work activity of the individual in relation to his business and the nature and scope of the business itself before a decision is made.

Teachers and Instructors.—Persons engaged in the teaching profession, whether as professors, school teachers, or instructors in other types of institutions are coded to Major Group 27. (This excludes physical education instructors—not in schools—who are coded to Unit Group 3370—Coaches, Trainers, Instructors and Managers, Sport and Recreation).

Persons primarily engaged in giving on-the-job-training as their regular employment are considered to be distinct from foremen and are, therefore, classified in an appropriate unit group within Minor Group 279—Other Teaching and Related Occupations.

Presidents and Deans of Faculties in universities as well as principals in all types of schools, including business colleges, are considered to be administrators and are coded to Unit Group 1133—Administrators in Teaching and Related Fields.

Abbreviations

A list of abbreviations used in this volume is given on page 15 and is, for the most part, self-explanatory. Particular attention, however, should be given to the abbreviations “n.s.”, “n.e.c.”, “n.e.s.” and “n.o.r.”. “N.s.” means “not stated” or “not specified” in the census return. “N.e.c.” means “not elsewhere classified” in the occupational classification. “N.e.s.” means “not elsewhere specified” in the occupational classification. “N.o.r.” means “not otherwise reported” on the census return.

Not stated (n.s.) usually indicates that other similar but more specific occupational titles are listed in the Alphabetical Index. The code symbol assigned to the title, qualified by this abbreviation, is to be used only when the reported occupation together with any other entry on the census questionnaire (particularly the industry entry) does not indicate one of the more precise titles shown. A case in point is the title “8273—Washer n.s.—Textile Mill” which appears in the Alphabetical Index along with such titles as “Washer, Fabric—Textile Mill” and “Washer, Brush—Textile Mill”. In coding “Washer”, therefore, the coder carefully examines the list of “Washers” given and only uses the code for “Washer n.s.” if the one reported does not fit the other titles shown.

In the Index “n.s.” is frequently implied, e.g. when the title “Manager” or “Foreman” (unqualified) is followed by a dash and in industry qualification. In such cases, therefore, the coder does not use the assigned occupational code if the specific kind of manager or foreman is reported in the occupation entry of the census questionnaire. That is, if the questionnaire indicates a foreman in wholesale trade is, in fact, a “Shipping Foreman”, then he should be classified to Unit Group 4150—Supervisors: Material Recording, Scheduling and Distributing Occupations and not Unit Group 5130—Supervisors: Sales Occupations, Commodities. It is the nature of the work done in the department of the establishment in which a person works, not the principle activity of the establishment, which qualifies the occupation. For example, if the occupation is reported as “Manager” and the kind of business entry is “Printing and Publishing (circulation department)” such a person would be classified to Unit Group 1137—Sales and Advertising Management Occupations. The coder assesses other relevant criteria to determine whether the person concerned is performing a management occupation of the type included in Major Group 11, or a “supervisory” type of occupation.

If an occupation reported on the questionnaire is not listed in any form in the Index, it is necessary to classify it in the most appropriate unit group of the relevant minor group. An occupation is classified to the residual (n.e.c.) unit group of its relevant minor group if it cannot be ascertained that it belongs in any particular unit group: for example, “Metal Ceiling Hanger—Construction” cannot be classified in any of the specific unit groups within Minor Group 878/879—Other Construction Trades Occupations and must, therefore, be classified in Unit Group 8799—Other Construction Trades Occupations, n.e.c.

If a reported occupation cannot be assigned to a specific minor group but is identified as coming within the general definition of a particular major group, then that occupation is classified in the residual (n.e.c.) unit group of the last minor group within that major group. For example, "Ivory Carver—Any Industry" falls within the general definition of Major Group 83—Machining and Related Occupations but it is not specific to any one of the relevant minor groups of "machinists". It is therefore assigned code 8399 which is the residual unit group of the last minor group (839) within Major Group 83.

If the situation should arise whereby an occupation could conceivably be classified in two or more minor groups within one major group, then that occupation will likewise be assigned to the last residual (n.e.c.) unit group of the last minor group within that major group: for example, "Button Maker—Button Mfg." could be classified in more than one minor group in Major Group 85—Product Fabricating Assembling and Repairing Occupations and must be classified in the last minor group (859). To advance one step further, if an occupation is so described that it might be assigned to any of two or more major groups (usually due to lack of specificity) then it is assigned to one of the appropriate unit groups of Minor Group 991—Occupations Not Elsewhere Classified of the last major group (99): for example, "Equipment Cleaner—Any Industry" could be in several major groups and is, therefore, classified in Unit Group 9919—Other Occupations, n.e.c.

Major Group 99 thus serves a dual purpose; first as a residual for occupations that cannot, for some reason, be included in any one of the foregoing major groups; and secondly, to accommodate situations such as that cited in the example above where more than one major group is involved.

Not Elsewhere Specified (n.e.s.) is used interchangeably with "n.e.c." It is a holdover from the 1961 Classification whereas "n.e.c." is used exclusively in the CCDO.

Not Otherwise Reported (n.o.r.) covers such cases as those in which the lay occupations of members of religious orders who are primarily engaged in performing lay duties are not reported on the census questionnaire. "N.o.r." was used in the title of Unit Group 2513—Nuns and Brothers, n.o.r. to permit inclusion of lay occupations for which the type of work performed is not indicated on the questionnaire. In coding a nun or brother, therefore, the coder uses code 2513 only if a lay occupation is not reported.

Language

In order to reflect the bilingual nature of Canada's labour force, the 1971 Occupational Classification Manual is published in both an English and a bilingual form. In the latter, both English and French occupational titles are listed in one alphabetical arrangement to produce a bilingual index. An English volume has been produced for use in those areas where French is unlikely to be reported. The French titles in the bilingual volume are those commonly used and are not translations of the English titles. As a fund of occupational titles reported in French is accumulated, future editions can include a completely French manual.

Alphabetical Arrangement in the Indexes of this Manual

Each word in a title is taken separately for purposes of alphabetical arrangement; this follows the practice used in the SIC. The following titles will be found in this order in the index:

car dealer	carder
car painter	caretaker
car washer	carpenter
card grinder	carton wrapper

Where the same occupational title is listed more than once, then the alphabetical order of the industry qualification prevails. For example:

car painter—auto repair shop car painter—garage car painter—motor vehicle mfg.

The same occupational title may be shown in three different spelling arrangements.

If such is the case, the following alphabetical order prevails:

pipe line foreman
pipe-line foreman
pipeline foreman

It is important, therefore, if a title is not found readily in the Alphabetical Index, to consider whether it may have been reported as a single word or as two or more separate words.

Multiple-Word Occupational Titles

Many occupational titles shown in the Index contain two or more words. If an attempt were made to cross-index all multiple-word titles, the Index would become so long as to be unwieldy. In the Alphabetical Index, therefore, the following practices are followed:

(a) Certain occupational titles, are commonly reported in a given order and are indexed only in that order. Examples are:

cabinet maker	lathe hand
calendar man	notary public
drill runner	paper boy
heat treater	track worker
kiln burner	trouble shooter

(b) Cross-Indexing: Occupational titles which are commonly reported both in natural order of the words and in some inverted order are shown both ways in the Alphabetical Index: for example, "Parking Attendant" and "Attendant, Parking", "Bottling Foreman" and "Foreman, Bottling". There are many cases in which multiple-word titles are cross-indexed. It is necessary to try all possible orders of words before deciding that the title is not in the Alphabetical Index.

(c) Key Word: An exception to (b) is an occupational title containing the key word "Operator". Such a title will be shown only in its inverted form in the Alphabetical Index: for example, "Operator, Bleach—Pulp and Paper Mill". Since no inverted titles are shown in the Classified Index, this title appears in that Index as "Bleach Operator".

Abbreviated Occupational Titles

Abbreviated occupational titles appear at the beginning of each alphabetical section as determined by the first letter. Examples are: "C.P.A." for Certified Public Accountant; "D.D.S." for Doctor of Dental Surgery; "P.B.X. Operator" for Private Branch Exchange Operator; "R.O.P. Inspector" for Record of Performance Inspector.

Words in Parentheses

Some occupational titles in the manual contain words in parentheses. For example, see the titles "Refrigeration Engineer (Mech. Engineer)" and "Refrigeration Engineer (Stationary Engineer)". The title "Refrigeration Engineer" describes different jobs depending upon whether the incumbent requires professional qualification. Because of the abundance of "engineers" in the labour force today, coders are instructed to pay special attention to cases in which this word is included in a title. The coder must refer to the individual's schooling in order to determine whether to apply one of the unit group codes under Minor Group 214, reserved for professional engineers or some other appropriate unit group code (not professional) consistent with the nature of the work performed.

Occupations Not Stated

A special code 0000 has been created to cover those situations in which the occupation cannot be determined from the census questionnaire.

Concluding Remarks

The indexes to this Occupational Classification Manual have been printed from type set on the basis of magnetic tape files. Approximately 25,000 punched cards were assembled for the programme (including inverted titles) and considerable editing was involved to keep the number of cards to a minimum, therefore abbreviations have been used extensively.

It should be pointed out that while every effort has been made to ensure that occupations in this manual are classified to the same groups as they will be in Volume I of the CCDO, some inconsistencies are inevitable due to the unavoidable difference in publication deadlines. It should also be noted that the major, minor and unit group titles in the classified index in Volume II of the Census Manual are a condensed form of those shown in the list of group titles. This was necessary to accommodate the titles in the limited space available.

Close liaison has been maintained between the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the Department of Manpower and Immigration during the development of the CCDO and of this manual classification. Nevertheless, the lists and definitions of all occupations in the CCDO had not been finalized when the Census Manual went to print and the complete CCDO being developed in the Department of Manpower and Immigration will not be published for some months. It is expected, however, that the detailed CCDO Volume I will be available for reference purposes during census coding and it will be extremely valuable when used in conjunction with the present Manual.
